fact, all that he is reported to said concerning her was to curse ay: "She made me trouble all time and now she's making me jail."

Receive First Word.

the first intimation the police had the supposed murder was about one o'clock this morning, when a phone message to the police station summoning Chief of Police Ap- and District Attorney Stanley middle was received from Officer Champion.

ted Bergsterman, father of the n, went to the Roessling store morning, and there informed Eugene Roessling that his daughter had been killed. Mr. Roessling immediately called up Officer Champion who went to the Bergsterman home at 34 Grand Avenue. He found the woman's body lying face down on the floor between a lounge and a rusty old stove that had been set up in the room. There was a pool of blood with the body lay, and a large blood stain on the couch. Champion at once called a passing workman and asked him to send for Chief of Police Appleby and District Attorney Dunwiddie, and about seven o'clock the body was taken to the morgue. Bergsterman was arrested and placed in the city lock-up.

Attacked With Hammer.

An investigation was made by the authorities, and the theory now held by the police is that Bergsterman, being home drunk last night about one o'clock, had engaged in a quarrel with his daughter, and either struck her with a hammer that was lying under the couch, or kicked her on the right side of the abdomen, which was badly bruised and had caused the woman to bleed freely.

gone to Roessling's store to telephone but could not get in there. "Why didn't you come down town and tell us about it then?" he was asked, and his reply was, "Well, it was after ten o'clock."

"Yes, but you have been down town lots of times until after midnight," the Chief told him. "Yes, I know it," was his reply.

"And we knew she had a temper and fought with you sometimes," Bergsterman was silent for a few seconds and finally said: "I didn't do it. I didn't have nothing to do with it."

Was Frequently Abused.

That the woman had been frequently abused by her father is attested to by neighbors and friends for whom she had worked. They had frequently prophesied that he would some day murder her, and the fact that the two had frequently quarreled, and that he had not notified the police immediately, leads the officers to believe that the father is responsible for her death.

The woman, it is known, would display her temper in quarrels with her father, and would fight with him, and friends had advised her to leave the home. She had planned to do this, and yesterday had secured another place to stay. She was last seen about nine o'clock last night, and it is thought that a quarrel erupted on her father's return when he learned that she was to leave.

House Desolate.

The house where the woman met her death stands near the edge of the old Millstone quarry, a short distance from where the road branches off from Center avenue. The property is owned by Milo H. Curtis of this city and is a small structure, a hovel rather than a home. Two small rooms that had been used as a kitchen, and a living room constitute the downstairs part, and upstairs was the chamber, where Miss Bergsterman had been accustomed to sleep.

The interior was in the most squalid and filthy condition. Dirt and debris littered the floors, and the place was hardly fit for habitation. In the room where the body lay, was a dilapidated couch with an old sack thrown over it, which had served as Bergsterman's bed; a rickety, rusty old stove and stove pipe, a table on which a few dirty dishes and a few other utensils were scattered, all coated with a layer of dirt. Besides these, the only furniture in the room was a chair and a box with a bush on it, which had evidently served as a wash stand when cleanliness was considered. The entire appearance of the house and rooms is one of squalor and extreme poverty.

Matilda Bergsterman was about thirty-seven years of age. She was born in Chicago, according to her father's statement, on December 29, 1875 and came to this city when the family moved here in 1891. He is a blacksmith by trade and worked for many years for the Janesville Carriage company. Besides her father, she is survived by a brother, Ben Bergsterman of this city, who for some time past had not been living with his father and sister, and a sister, Mrs. Harry Shaw of Waukesha. Word of Miss Bergsterman's death was sent to Mrs. Shaw and she was expected to reach here on the afternoon train.

Bergsterman is a man—sixty-one years of age. He has been brought into court before, but the only charge preferred against him were those of drunkenness. He is a man about five feet six inches in height, with black hair turning gray, gray mustache and Van Dyke beard and a ruddy complexion. He was dressed in his working clothes when arrested.

A coroner's jury composed of A. P. Anderson, A. Smith, W. T. Tallman, L. R. Teat, E. T. Fish and F. P. Starr was summoned by Justice Stanley Tallman this morning at the order of District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie. The jurors were taken to the Nelson undertaking rooms and there sworn in for the investigation. A visit was made to the Bergsterman home and the facts of the murder as gained by the police were outlined to the jurors there. The inquest was then adjourned to ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Witnesses were subpoenaed this afternoon and tomorrow morning they will give their testimony before the coroner's jury.

BALKAN STATES ARE PREPARING FOR WAR

Armies of Balkan States Are Preparing For Fighting in Great Haste.

London, Eng., Oct. 1.—The armies of the Balkan states are preparing for war with feverish activity. The mobilization order given out yesterday is being put into effect with all speed according to dispatches received here. The various nations concerned appear to believe that the lunged for moment has at last arrived when they will be called upon to march against Turkey.

These still remain but two points in regard to which diplomats can continue to maintain optimism. The first of these is the fact that winter is approaching and will render active war operations difficult while the second is that the European powers are working in accord and have warned the belligerent little states that whatever might be the outcome of the war they will not be allowed to extend any of their borders so as to take in a portion of Macedonia.

Everything, according to the dispatches from the disturbed centers seems ripe for the long expected conflagration in the near east.

The most urgent and categorical representations in favor of the preservation of peace in the Balkans have been made to Sofia by the Russian minister Sergius Sazonoff, the other members of the triple entente, France and Great Britain, and likewise using their good influence, while the members of the triple alliance—Germany, Austria and Italy—are just as determined to prevent the outbreak of hostilities.

The powers have again brought before the Porte in the most friendly manner the urgent necessity for the introduction of reforms in Macedonia. The Greek minister here received a telegram today from the Greek premier and War Minister E. Venizelos, stating that the Hellenic government had decided to mobilize its land and sea forces in concert with the other states.

The mobilization orders of the four kingdoms go into force instantly and men liable to serve must join the colors within 24 hours. The orders also apply to subjects living abroad.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 1.—A large increase in the membership of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rites Masonry, extending over all parts of the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction is reported by Sovereign Grand Commander Barton Smith of Toledo, Ohio, to the council today. The delivery of the allocation of the sovereign commander marked the beginning of the second day's session of the triennial convention of thirty second degree bodies. The sovereign grand commander reported that from July 1, 1911 to July 1, 1912 there was an increase of 1,979 initiations to the 14th degree and of whom 1,210 attained the 32nd degree. The reports show further that the initiations last year were 6,289 in lodge, 5,679 in council, 5,694 in chapter and 5,779 in consistory. Tonight the 33rd degree will be conferred upon 75 candidates with full ceremony.

RACERS INJURED IN ACCIDENT ON CURVE

Car Driven By David Bruce At Milwaukee Races Overturned While Going At Ninety Miles
An Hour.

Milwaukee, Oct. 1.—Running in at a speed of nearly 90 miles an hour, the Fiat car bearing David Bruce Brown and his mechanic, Scudlari, overturned in a ditch after rounding the hairpin turn, the northwestern corner of the Vanderbilt automobile cup race track, seriously injuring Brown and his mechanic. Both men were rushed to the Trinity hospital.

Brown had been running at most neck and neck with Teddie Tezlar also in a Fiat and after running the hairpin turn Tezlar forged to the lead.

Tezlar looked back after going a short distance and was surprised to find that Bruce Brown's car had disappeared. Summing that something was wrong he turned back and came upon Bruce Brown's crippled car in a ditch beside the track.

Brown's clothes torn and covered with dust was lying limp upon the ground, while his mechanic was lying in a ditch near the car. An automobile with two physicians was rushed to the scene from the main tent hospital at the grand stand and the condition of the two men was found to be such that they were immediately rushed to the Trinity hospital.

At 2:30 this afternoon physicians reported an operation on both men successful. Both men suffered from fractured skulls. Their condition is found to be very encouraging.

TELLS OF ROOSEVELT CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

PROGRESSIVE PARTY TREASURER TELLS OF COLLECTIONS AND EXPENDITURES PRECEDING PRIMARY.

CRANE'S CONTRIBUTION

Declares That Chicago Man Gave $70,000 to Both La Follette and Wilson Funds in Interest of Progressive Reform.

Washington, Oct. 1.—E. H. Hooker, treasurer of the progressive party, today told the Clapp committee investigating campaign funds that Charles R. Crane of Chicago had contributed $70,000 to Senator La Follette's campaign fund and $70,000 to Governor Wilson's fund prior to the Baltimore convention, practically at the same time.

Mr. Hooker said he had acted informally as national treasurer of the Roosevelt organization, in the pre-convention campaign. At the request of Chairman Clapp he placed in evidence a statement of all receipts and expenditures in the Roosevelt primary campaign in New York City.

"The secretary of state of New York," said Mr. Hooker, "said this was the most complete statement ever filed by a political committee."

"How many votes did you get in the New York primaries?" asked Senator Pomerene.

"About 30,000. As many as Taft got," said Hooker, "but they were not counted."

Senator Pomerene observed that the primary expenditures was at the rate of "about $2 a vote." Mr. Hooker vigorously resented any inference that any money was expended in an improper way.

"I believe that this national primary campaign was the most economical ever conducted," said he, "more economic than any except the Taft primary campaign in New York this fall."

The statement filed by Mr. Hooker covering the national expenses of the Roosevelt primary campaign, showed a total of $143,999.82 in the fight preceding the Chicago convention. The greatest expenditure by the national organization was in Massachusetts, to which $22,000 was sent for the primary fight. The expenditures were summarized as follows: Printing and advertising, $17,000; salaries to employees, $4,000; telegraph and telephone, $4,000; traveling expense, including Roosevelt-Beveridge western trips, $17,000; postage and mailing, $8,000; New York national headquarters, $4,577; sent to Senator Dixon for the Washington headquarters, $7,500.

The amounts sent to the various state campaign committees were given as follows: Massachusetts, $52,000; Maryland, $5,000; Maine, $3,500; Vermont, $5,000; Illinois, $12,500; Oklahoma, $2,500; recount in Massachusetts, $475; in Vermont, $34.00.

The Hooker statement showed total receipts of $143,999.82 and a total expenditure of $141,657.64 for all national campaign primary expenses up to Sept. 7, 1912. The list of independent contributors follows: Frank Munsey, $19,000; George W. Perkins, $22,500; W. Enlin Roosevelt, $10,000; D. R. Hanna, $25,000; H. B. Stoddard, $4,000; Alex. S. Cochran, $10,000; W. B. Barbour, $7,500; Charles S. Bly, $3,500; Oscar L. Straus, $500; E. D. Bridgeway, $1,000; Hamilton Fish, $1,000; Frederick Whitebridge, $1,000; Herman Frasch, $10,000; Frank B. Keech, $1,000; J. B. Larkins, $1,000; Olivia M. Cutting, $1,000; Dr. Albert Shaw, $3,000; Everett Colby, $150; Douglas Robinson, $5,000; E. H. Hooker and Blanche Ferry Hooker, $5,000; Roosevelt committee of the City of New York, $6,519.83.

Senator Clapp asked whether Mr. Hooker had any further information to give the committee. "Yes, I know of a $70,000 campaign fund," "Who gave it?" asked Senator Clapp.

"Charles R. Crane. I also know that he gave the same amount to Governor Wilson's fund. Mr. Crane himself told me," said the witness, "that he was making these contributions at the same time."

Mr. Hooker said Mr. Crane was a "very public-spirited citizen and was helping both men on in the work he was in sympathy with. He was helped both men because he believed they were progressive," said Mr. Hooker.

He had talked with Mr. Crane at the Chicago club "in March or April."

"Tell us what he said," demanded Senator Pomerene.

"He said that he had already given $70,000 and was contributing $4,000 a week to keep the campaign going," replied the witness. "He said it was very expensive."

This concluded Mr. Hooker's examination and Mr. Teggler was recalled long enough to say he had no telegram in his possession or had he ever seen any in which President Roosevelt asked Mr. Harriman to look out for the selection of a good man for United States senator in California.

COLONEL NEARS END OF CAMPAIGN TOUR

Declares He Feels "Bully" Although A Trifle Hoarse—in New York Tomorrow.

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 1.—Colonel Roosevelt today entered North Carolina, the last state in which he is expected to spend the last part of his trans-continental tour which is said to extend over 10,000 miles. Tonight he will speak at Raleigh at eight and he will then return to New York where he will remain until tomorrow afternoon.

On Thursday night he plans to leave for Washington where he is expected to testify Friday before the Senate investigation committee on campaign contributions.

The colonel said he was feeling "Bully" but he was a trifle hoarse. He commented today that he had added another tune to those of the meagre list of which he is able to recognize when he hears them.

It is "Onward Christian Soldiers" which he has heard at Progressive meetings everywhere on his present trip. The other two times he says he is familiar with are "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Garry Owen."

Johnson Active.

New York, Oct. 1.—Governor Johnson left New York this morning for Utica where he will begin a four days' state campaign with a meeting at noon. ARRAIGN FIFTY-ONE IN DYNAMITE TRIAL

GOVERNMENT STAGES DRAMATIC CASE AT INDIANAPOLIS IN EFFORT TO FIND GUILTY DYNAMITERS.

PLEA OF M'MANAGLE

As Entered Before Judge Anderson This Morning Was Guilty—Charges Against Three Men Dismissed.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 1.—Whoever participated with the McNamara brothers in the series of white and nitroglycerin explosions which preceded and followed the wrecking of the Los Angeles Times building, Oct. 1, 1910, when 21 persons were killed, the government hopes to disclose in the trial which begins today before Judge A. B. Anderson of fifty-one men.

At the head of the list of defendants who thus far are brought into court exactly two years after the Los Angeles disaster are:

Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers.

Orville E. McManigle, once known as "J. W. McGraw" on the Pacific Coast, a confessed dynamiter and accomplice of the McNamara brothers, who has been kept in custody as a witness for the prosecution ever since his arrest in Detroit a year ago last April.

Herbert S. Hockin, successor of John J. McNamara as secretary-treasurer of the union, whom McManigle accuses of being the organizer of the "dynamiting crew," and one of the originators of the alarm clock scheme by which explosions were set off several hours after the mine was placed.

On motion of the government the cases against J. W. Ryan, Peoria, Ill.; Andrew J. McManis, Springfield, Ill.; and Patrick H. Ryan, Chicago, were dismissed. The government announced it had no evidence against them to warrant their trial. All of the men had been identified with the ironworkers' union.

At the outset Orville E. McManigle pleaded guilty. Eugene A. Clancey and Olaf A. Tveitmo of San Francisco pleaded not guilty. All the defendants at their arraignment last March had pleaded not guilty. Daniel J. Brophy of Brooklyn, a former executive and board member of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, was reported unable to appear on account of a broken leg. His absence left fifty men to be tried.

A motion to set aside the order consolidating the cases made on behalf of the defendants was sustained. This separated the various indictments, but left the defendants to be tried together. McManigle, aged about 40 years, short, chubby and of a florid complexion, entered the court room grinning.

His eyes twinkled keenly as he glanced at the other defendants. He closely scrutinized the men with whom he asserts he once was associated, but against whom he now is arrayed as a prosecuting witness. "Orville E. McManigle do you plead guilty or not guilty to the charges against you?" asked Judge Anderson.

The scene was dramatic. A score of attorneys leaned forward to hear the prisoner's reply. McManigle rubbed the back of his hand across his chin and grinned again. "I plead guilty, your honor," he said. McManigle's plea qualified him for a witness for the government, for which purpose he had been imprisoned for 18 months, but it occasioned no surprise for he already had confessed to his operations as a member of the McNamara "dynamiting crew" to having carried nitroglycerine and dynamite in a suit-case from state to state on passenger trains and having actually blown up the Llewellyn Iron Works in Los Angeles, December 25, 1910, for complicity in which John J. McNamara was sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment.

McManigle has been in custody ever since his arrest with James B. McNamara in a hotel in Detroit on April 12, 1910. When arrested, each with a suit-case filled with enough dynamite and nitroglycerine to blow up the hotel, they were wending their way through a crowd of theatrical people gathered in the lobby.

Fifty-four indicted.

Most of the other defendants are present or former union officials whom the government charges were linked together in a conspiracy by an extensive correspondence from 1905 to 1911 during which time more than 100 explosions in states scattered from Massachusetts to California occurred in works under construction by employers of non-union labor.

Fifty-four men were indicted last February, but John J. McCray, Wheeling, W. Va., never has been located and the McNamara brothers are in prison in California.

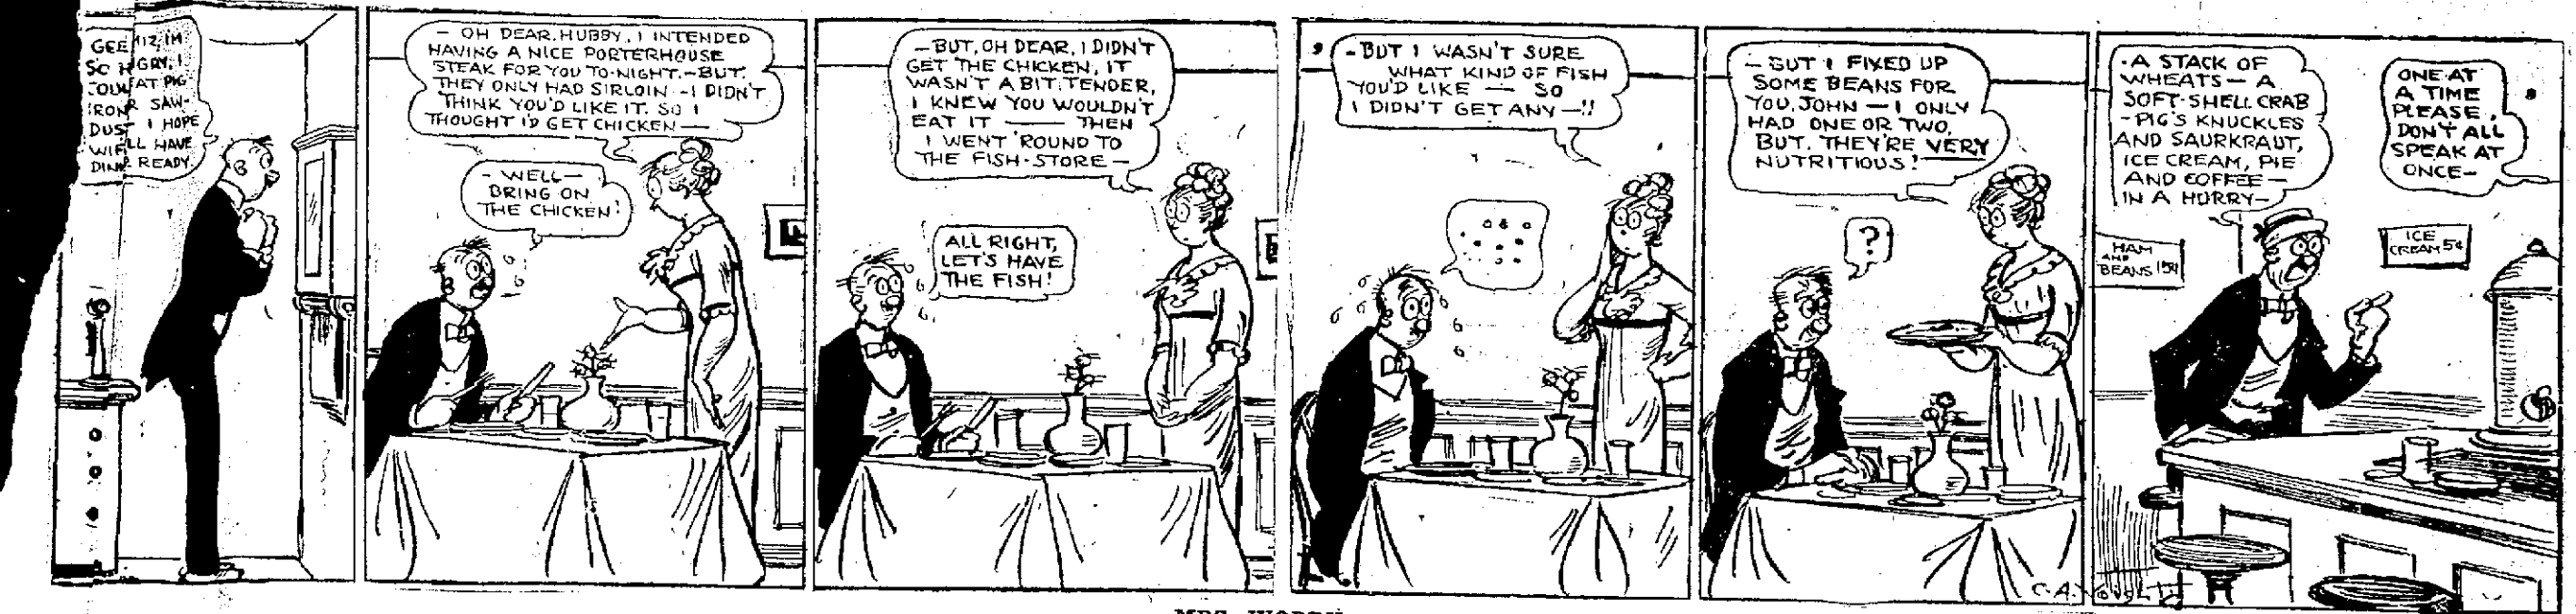

The courtroom which probably for weeks will be the scene of the trial has long been ready. Every precaution has been taken to secure the trial. The windows of the state room, located on an outside corner of the second floor of the federal building, have been heavily curtained to exclude the daylight. Recently Anderson had the walls and ceiling thickly padded with felt to insure the sound conditions.

United States Senator Joseph Kern has been retained as counsel for the defendants, while the government will be represented by Attorney Charles W. Miller, assistant.

Sixteen defendants were ordered $10,000 bonds each, to appear for trial and the others were ordered $5,000.

Witnesses are to be called in many parts of the country.

MRS. WORRY.

Few prent day pitchers can boast of a record equaling that of Cy Young, reed "grand old man" of baseball. 21 of his 24 years in big league company Cy struck out 2,766 men and bled 1,179. Which means that at the lowest possible count, he threw the ball across the plate 13,614 times. This does not include the balls he might have given the men who struck out the strikes he may have had on them who walked. Neither does it include the times he threw the ball to the catcher who caught it, or who caught it or who caught it. Old Cy probably has expended enough energy in throwing to batmen to carry a flying machine to the planet Mars.

RUMOR THAT STAR PLAYER MAY BE DISQUALIFIED

Falter Will Appear in Line-Up Next Saturday in Spite of Gloomy Reports.

Rumor has it in high school football circles that Falter, star right half-back, has been disqualified. There is no authority for the statement, however, and unless such forthcoming before Saturday he will appear in the line-up against Stoughton next Saturday. Falter is an experienced man and a hard player. The team could scarcely afford to lose him.

Practice continues nightly and it is expected that the eleven will be in first class shape for the opening of the season.

seats, except in center field where prices will be 50 cents.

Congratulations are due President Johnson of the American league for the apparently successful fight he has waged against the ticket scalping evil in the world's series. In previous years it has been no uncommon thing for scalpers to sell for $20 each tickets which cost them not more than $2 or $3. Under the strict rules governing the sale of tickets this year, the old scalping nuisance is likely to be done away with almost entirely.

Young Abe Attell, the St. Louis bantamweight, has agreed to meet Harry Miller, the Milwaukee bantam, in Cincinnati on October 7 or 14. In meeting Miller, Attell will stack against one of the hardest purchasers of his weight in the world. Mike Donlin, Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder and comedian, has turned into a rabid Christian Scientist. No jokes about it, Mike's in earnest. Mabel Hite, his actress wife, was given up by doctors not long ago and grasped at Science as a last straw. Now she's about well.

"It's wonderful," recently declared Mike. "Christian Science saved my wife's life. I don't know much about it but I'm learning; it's got me and I'm going to stick to it."

Young Persons Popular in Evansville Social Circles Wed at High Noon Yesterday—Other News.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Evansville, Oct. 1.—Two young persons, popular in the social set here, Miss Neva Grace Fellows, and Grant Howard, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents at high noon yesterday.

Rev. D. Q. Grubb of the Congregational church officiated, using the ring service. The bride was dressed in white silk, carried white roses, and was attended by Miss Eva Howard of Madison, sister of the groom.

Miss Howard's gown was of light green messaline veiled with net and she carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bride was given away by her father, Roy Fellows, brother of the bride was groomsmen.

Miss Beth Baker played the wedding march and Miss Barbara Pearson gave a vocal solo, accompanied by Miss Baker on the violin.

After the ceremony a delicious three-course dinner was served. The color scheme was pink and white. The decorations were pink and white, asters, smilax and ferns.

Mrs. Howard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Fellows, who reside near Fellows Station. She was graduated from the Evansville high school with the class of 1909.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Howard of Magnolia and was one of the graduating class of 1910.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard went at once to their new home at Magnolia where they will be at home to their many friends and where the good wishes of all follow.

Some of those from Evansville who attended the wedding at Fellows Station yesterday, were: Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Pearson and Miss Barbara Pearson, Dr. and Mrs. Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. George Howard.

OFFICER 666, a farce that has already registered a run of nearly a year in New York and Chicago, is found in the fact that while the story is melodramatic and revolves around a famous crook who is being sought after by the police, and the accompanying situations farcical in the extreme, the piece shows admirable points of play construction forcefully illustrated in its deft touches of heart-throbs, combined with humorous lines and situations that make for the heartiest laughter.

"Officer 666" is one of the important Cohen & Harris shows announced for presentation in this city October 8.

IF YOU ARE THINKING

Of Buying a Base Burner, Read This

Don't Buy a Base Burner According to Price. Buy It According to Its Radiating Surface.

The more radiating surface a Base Burner has, the more heat it will throw into the room.

Any stove can burn up coal, but mighty few Base Burners send the heat into the room. Most of them send it up the chimney.

THE FAVORITE Base Burner is the only stove that throws out all the heat from the coal into the room.

The reason why is the Favorite flues. The flues in the Favorite Base Burner carry the flame and heat of the fire to every square inch of the stove's surface.

The sectional cut herewith explains these flues better than we can in words. The heat passes from the fire into two outside down flues, across the bottom of the stove, under the ash pit, where it enters the central flue. It then passes back over the bottom, and up the chimney.

Just think of this great radiating surface, and it is more than doubled, because the flues are set out from the back of the stove, and separate from the bottom of the ash pit.

The flues therefore radiate heat from all sides, and the back of the stove, and bottom of the ash pit radiate heat also.

These features alone put the Favorite in a class by itself making it the best and most economical heating stove in existence.

But other features of its construction must not be overlooked. Would like to tell you all about them.

GAZETTE PRINTING CO.

NEWSPAPER REGULATION.

In another part of the paper will be found a statement of the ownership, management and circulation of the Gazette, published in compliance of the new law which goes into effect today. A copy of this report has been filed with the postoffice department.

The bill which created this law was attached to several important measures as a rider, and rushed through without debate, during the closing days of congress. It has been the subject of much discussion since, and the censorship is regarded as unjust by many publishers. The following comments from an eastern exchange express popular sentiment among the publishers.

"A newspaper is a private enterprise, conducted for profit, and it is no business of congress or the post-office whose enterprise it is, or who reaps the profit. The police power of the separate states requires, quite properly, a responsible name for each publication, so that any person who feels himself aggrieved may sue something more than a figment or a pseudonym. This is no abridgment of the freedom of the press, but merely a provision against allowing that freedom to degenerate into license. This is a matter which the states can take care of themselves, and one with which, as Mr. Beck truly says, the federal government has no concern or jurisdiction.

"For its own sake a newspaper keeps its columns as clean as it can; and in the long run its readers measure it very accurately. The press is better today, and incomparably more competent in the scientific collection of news, than it ever was before. The Tribune today is a greatly better newspaper than it was under Horace Greeley. The newspaper press is far from perfect; but its development has been along the lines of liberty; and nothing better calculated to arrest its progress in the right direction could be devised than restrictive legislation by congress."

There is of course another side to the question, and arguments in defense of the law claim that the public has a right to know whether a paper is owned and controlled by politicians or private interests. In other words, whether it is an organ or a newspaper. The contention is also made that the advertiser is entitled to know what he is buying, and so a sworn circulation statement is provided. No honest publisher can object to that feature of the law.

The public is also protected from frauds, as a paper can no longer assume responsibility for fake advertising. This is a feature which all papers should welcome. The law should be thoroughly tested before being condemned. It may prove a blessing in disguise.

THE PARCELS POST.

The new law which provides for the entering wedge of the parcels post, will take effect as soon as the special stamps are ready, which will probably be about December 1st. The success or failure of the enterprise will doubtless determine whether the provisions of the law shall be extended to cover the country.

Much has been said both for and against this innovation. The president favors it on the humanitarian ground of "the greatest good to the greatest number."

The mail order houses and department stores favor it, for reasons which are apparent, and are already planting warehouses in various sections of the country, to aid in the distribution of goods.

The farmers of the land are supposed to be the principal beneficiaries and they, of course, are not opposing it.

That it will encourage monopoly in merchandising, is hardly a debatable question and that it will work a hardship to men engaged in business in the towns and inland cities, is equally apparent.

The middleman has always been a bone of contention, and how to get rid of him is one of the problems which students of political economy have vainly attempted to solve. The parcels post, when thoroughly established, may aid in the solution.

When Sears, Roebuck & Co. distribute $250,000,000 worth of goods annually—and this is what they expect to do, by the aid of the parcels post, within the next five years—the country merchant will fade away like the morning dew, and grass will grow in the streets in many of our smaller towns and cities.

If that is a good thing for either the farmer, or the country at large, will someone please arise and explain. The woman who buys her soap in Buffalo and the man who patronizes the mail order houses, are both abundantly able to pay the freight, and neither are entitled to aid or encouragement from the government.

The census of 1910 shows that the increase in population is principally confined to the large cities, while many of the towns and inland cities are at a standstill, or on the decline. While the president and the law-makers may consider these conditions desirable, they are not, but instead are a menace to general prosperity. The parcels post is on a par with reform legislation.

HIRAM JOHNSON.

From the heights of his majestic intellect the Hon. Hiram Johnson, Reinzi of the Golden Gate, looks down on Mr. Taft, "politically the most pitiful figure in our political history."

What makes Mr. Taft the most pitiful political figure.

Is it to have passed the Jeffersonian examination? Is it to have been honest, able, faithful to the constitution? Is it to have continued and carried out within the forms of law whatever was sound and desirable in the policies of Theodore Roosevelt?

Is it to have reduced, so far as the recommendations of the executive could reduce, the spendthrift reckless extravagance of congress?

Is it to have given the United States an administration competent, intelligent, thoroughly progressive?

Is it to have achieved through the courts those prosecutions of violators of the Sherman act that Mr. Taft's predecessor effected mainly with his everlasting lungs, a kindly hand always reaching behind his back for friendly contributions and supporters?

Is it to have made the White House a place of dignity and distinction, and not an exhibit of the Midway Plaisance and annex of Bedlam?

Is to have been a constitutional and limited ruler, not a Byzantine autocrat?

Is it to have been faithful, loyal, modest, an intellect and not a voice, quietly pursuing amid the meanest treachery of old friends and associates the path of honor?

Is it to have been straightforward among the crooked?

Is it to have been patient under such absolutely causeless calumny as has not been uttered against a president since the days of the Aurora?

It strikes some of us, it may strike many of us, that the sense of justice and fair play is not yet dead among Americans. The Hiram Johnson and the other shrieking derisives of the Mahdi of Oyster Bay possess the air. But there is such a thing as overdoing it. It is not Mr. Taft that has changed since Mr. Roosevelt so justly praised him. Mr. Roosevelt wants the job. That is all there is to it. He will not get it. He may prevent Mr. Taft from getting it again. But Mr. Roosevelt, with all the inexhaustible discharge of his gall and all the patter of his parasites, cannot prevent the sober part of the American people, Republicans or Democrats, from acknowledging that William Howard Taft is fit to be president; and if Mr. Taft loses the presidency he cannot lose the respect of this countrymen. He is a man of truth, of rectitude, of honor.

If there were a candidate for president of whom that could not be said, such a candidate would be the most pitiful political figure in our history—since Aaron Burr.—New York Sun.

This plain analysis of President Taft, the man, and what he has accomplished, is well worth a careful reading. The attack of Governor Johnson of California, is on a par with the policy adopted by Colonel Roosevelt early in the campaign, and the dignified silence of President Taft is in sharp contrast.

It was said of the president, when elected, that it would take him four years to straighten out the tangles of his predecessor, and bring order out of confusion, but the work has been accomplished, and his administration would have been endorsed without a question but for the unseemly and unwarranted light made against him by the man who professed to be his best friend. The people are yet to be heard from.

An exchange relates that: Not long ago at a meeting of western traffic men, after the chairman, a man with fifty years' experience, had called the gathering to order, a youth with all the earmarks of self-assertion, arose and said: "This question of freight rates is remarkably interesting, and one which deserves the closest attention. For the past eighteen months I have been giving all my attention to the question and now feel qualified to address this meeting as an expert upon the question of how rates should be made and fixed." Just then the veteran chairman held up his hand and said: "Just a moment, young man. I have studied rates for almost half a century and still feel that there is lots more for me to learn. If you, after a year and a half, have found out all there is to know, then I wish to move that you be chosen chairman of the meeting while I take your seat on the floor."

The little bunch of nominees, representing the lesser lights on the abortion called a republican state ticket, assembled at La Crosse yesterday and denounced McGoheen, but resolved to support him. They had no use for the republican national ticket, and will doubtless follow the lead of state Senator Blaine and aid in organizing Wilson clubs throughout the state. That ought to help some on election day.

A forty dollar brass cuspidor is kicking around the halls at the state house, as a pleasant reminder of what the taxpayer is getting for his money. This is said to be only a sample, when every room is supplied it will be a pleasure to go to Madison to expectorate. Life, in the Badger state, is not so dreary as it seems.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON.

Mother's Pumpkin Pie.

Some folks prefer the fancy grub they serve at swell cafes, and cookin' by a foreign chef is really quite a craze.

The bill of fare, in fancy French, they like to take in hand, to demonstrate that they can make the waiter understand. They order up a high toned meal that may be very fine, but when it comes to eatin' good, I want no French in mine. I like the good old-fashioned meal, not like the kind you buy. It ends up with a great big slice of mother's pumpkin pie.

We always start in with the soup that is so lickin' good. That everyone is helped again—that's always understood.

And then we have a husky roast and fixin's family style. With sweet potatoes, Hubbard squash, and father's bound to pile enough on every feller's plate to last him for a week. And we all eat till we can hardly think or breathe or speak. But e'en at that we have to save some space, for bye and bye. The climax of the meal must come, in mother's pumpkin pie.

They talk about the joys of wealth and how to live in style. But I am glad that I must live the old way for a while; There's no dyspepsia in the house when mother's on the job. No indigestion, dizzy spells or gout. The meals are always served just right in winter, spring and fall. I like the whole year's bill of fare, but one thing best of all—When I am through with earthly things and take my place on high, it won't seem just like heaven without mother's pumpkin pie.

The Two-Piece Suit.
Fernando bought a two-piece suit—It costs five bones and was a beaut. He'd gazed upon it o'er and o'er Upon a dummy in the store.

'Twas rich and racy as to style. It could be heard for half a mile. He wore it to a picnic and The girls all called it simply grand, Till suddenly there came rain. That nearly drove the lad insane. Enough to drive a man to drink. It was to see those garments shrink. The pant legs raced up to his knees. It was a fine go-as-you-please. The sleeves up to his elbows shot. Fernando quickly quit the spot. And hurried home right in the squall. For fear he'd have no clothes at all. He burned the road at fearful pace. It was a real exciting race. It seemed as though the clothes would win.

Our hero staggered home, all in. And when at last he reached the house He had not much on but a blouse. He said, "At last my freedom's cinched. Another block and I've been pinched."

Why the Squirrels Follow Barkeepers.
"Say, Bo. Shake me up a Bull Moose cocktail."

"My father is going to leave me four millions. Ho-hum! Have you got a loose quarter in your jeans?"

"Maybe you ain't never heard of me. I'm the gink who put the suit in the sea. Make it a Lillian Russell ricker."

"Has there been a man in here this morning with a derby hat on?"
"Here's a new one, Steve. Why is a lawnmower like an ice wagon?"

The answer is: "Because there is a 'B' in 'BOTH.'"
"Huh! I got a better one than that, Steve. Listen. A 'bob-tailed hound' dawg looking for a rat under a liver stable? The answer: 'Because there is an 'H' on the end of 'EACH.' Do you get me, Steve?"

A Happy, Laughing Child In Few Hours

If Cross, Irritable, Feverish, Tongue Coated and Sick, Give Delicious "Syrup of Figs."

Your child isn't naturally cross, irritable and peevish. Mother! Examine the tongue, if coated, it means the little one's stomach is disordered, liver inactive and its thirty feet of bowels clogged with foul, decaying waste.

Every mother realizes after giving delicious "Syrup of Figs" that this is the ideal laxative and physic for children. Nothing else regulates the little one's tender stomach, liver and bowels so effectively, besides they dearly love its delightful, fig taste.

For constipated bowels, sluggish liver, biliousness, or sour disorders, stomach, feverishness, diarrhoea, sore throat, bad breath or to break a cold, give one-half to a teaspoonful of "Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged up waste, sour bile, undigested food and constipated matter will gently move on and out of the system without griping or nausea, and you will surely have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics cannot be harmful. Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Mixture of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

A PLAIN STATEMENT ON WISCONSIN TAXES

H. ROSENCRANTZ, PROMINENT MILWAUKEE LAWYER WRITES PERTINENT ARTICLE IN "SEARCHLIGHT."

UNIVERSITY IS A DRAIN

Points to Extravagance on Part of Administration and Shows How Insurgency is Responsible For Increased Expenditure.

H. Rosencrantz, a prominent Milwaukee attorney, in an article published in "The Searchlight," a weekly magazine issued at Gray's Lake, Ill., gives a plain exposition of the tax question in Wisconsin. Mr. Rosencrantz is attorney for the Milwaukee Street Railway Company and ranks very high professionally. He was a classmate of Alexander E. Matheson at the University law school. His article follows:

Insurgency is dead! On Nebo's lonely mountain lies another unmarked grave—or perhaps nothing so dignified as that. It may be in their haste to hear the band play at the Peace Congress of Armageddon, the cohorts of reform merely forgot the pompous prophet and couldn't remember now, for the life of them, what kind of a bluff farm it was from whence proceeded that erstwhile fountain of wisdom.

Anyway, if one of the dear plain people were asked at the present time to tell who was Robert Marion La Follette, he would scratch his head and with a puzzled look, reply:

"I disremember just exactly who he was, but it seems to me like he was one of them fellows that went over Niagara Falls in a barrel."

Those who formerly made up the ranks of the departed host, and who now style themselves progressives, may be divided into two classes: a feeble few who really believe, the propaganda they cherish and the large following who have embraced the doctrine for revenue only. The support of this horde of failures in other walks of life who have taken up reform as a gainful occupation has rendered a large payroll a necessity in glorious old Wisconsin. This lusty payroll has attained such enormous proportions in the last ten years that even its own parents are ashamed of it and are promising to give it an untidy diet in the near future. In the meantime, they are trying to squeeze it into stays that will sufficiently disguise its proportions to make it appear to the voter in November.

Naturally, as a state grows, the expenses of maintenance must also increase, but when the official report indicates that the population of Wisconsin has increased 13 per cent in ten years and the expenses have increased 400 per cent it sounds as if a plumber was needed at once.

Gov. Scofield, in an address at Delavan, Wis., before a farmers' institute in March, 1906, said:

"When there is collected from the public $100 more than is necessary to carry on the legitimate functions of government, there is danger of extravagance, and ultimately worse than extravagance."

The plain business man who has little time to go into details, but who knows that nearly 12 million dollars are now required to run this state, whereas ten years ago two and one-half millions did the work—before all this reform began—thinks that the worst case of extravagance stage has been reached, and he wants to know what we are getting for all this outlay. Now that is just what no one seems definitely to know. Of course, the official reports give the amounts expended, but under the amplified system of bureaus, commissions, and boards; advisory boards and advisory to advisory boards created under the present complete political machine, the published reports do not convey to the mind of the average reader a clear idea of how the money is spent, and it is next to impossible to discover who is in the state's employ; but we do know, whoever they are, they are not getting it naturally—for any one from the chief warden to the chief executive, has a duty to perform quite apart from his ostensible office. He must boost in season and out of season—but especially in season, for it is well known that wherever a primary is to be held, this army of mercenaries is massed—bireling shepherds herding the stray voters, guiding them into green pastures and beside good, rich, luscious waters.

While taxes have increased outrageously, plain business men would not make such a kick if he could see the benefits.

In looking over the report of the state's finances, the most astounding increase is found in the amounts expended for educational purposes, and especially in the sums required for running the state university.

Right here is an example of the difficulty encountered in ascertaining the exact amount disbursed in any particular department. Owing to the complicated system of record, an unthinking person might not at a glance comprehend the enormous increase in the expenses of this department. For instance: formerly, all disbursements for the university were included under the one item—"State University." Now the bun has become so vulgarly large that it seems more decent to divide it. We find under the head of university disbursements in the 1910 report, the modest sum of $628,194.39. That does not look so bad, but if one follows the matter up, one finds scattered about and variously listed, these additional sums: $26,000.00; $1,797,920.00; $23,328.50, and $7,547.70, making the grand total of $2,435,781.01, for running the state university in 1910. Few people in looking over the statement would make the addition and each item, taken by itself, looks innocent enough; yet the increase in the cost of running the institution over the cost in 1900, is nearly a million dollars, and the feeling is strong here in Wisconsin that the cause of education has not been advanced.

One conservative, thinking man who has watched the development of Wisconsin's institutions for more than half a century, expressed himself thus:

"It would be better for this old state if that institution was burned to the ground. The ashes would be a more wholesome influence on our young people."

Think of that! And from a man who without factional bias, has the best interests of the state at heart!

The care of the insane is another department where the cost of maintenance has been practically doubled. While, doubtless, these unfortunate are getting better care—and no care is too good for Wisconsin to give to its unfortunate charges—still, even considering the advanced cost of living, this great increase seems hardly warranted.

Another item most appalling in its proportions is the increase in the department of the Superintendent of Public Property. When we think that this means simply the care of the Capitol grounds, the plain business man finds it difficult to realize that $179,633.91 could be disbursed legitimately in this department. On closer observation, however, we observe that many people are employed in this department. A careful perusal of the list of those employed is edifying reading, for there is represented here nearly every branch of honest and dignified labor. There are no less than 17 janitors assisted by 9 scrub-women and 13 laborers not including the Chamberlain of the Chaplains and the Superintendent of the Squirrel Cage. There are elevator men, going up and others going down, and messengers whose arduous duty it is to collect the mail that accumulates about the Capitol and transport it to the postoffice a few blocks away, and we are reliably informed that this burdensome task must be repeated three times a day. But while it may be difficult to ascertain precisely what the duties of this army of laborers are, by making a simple calculation based on the amount expended and the number of listed employees, we find that each janitor, laborer and scrub-woman receives no less than an average of $2,200.00 per annum!

To carry out the provisions of the income tax business requires 210 known appointees—with no one knows how many assistants, but whatever the number, they all have their uses.

The following from E. L. Phillips' "Political Reform in Wisconsin" applies so forcibly to a resident of northern Wisconsin that the temptation is irresistible to quote it entirely:

"Another matter, small in itself, yet showing the tendency of the state's disbursements to increase, is the item of bounty on wild animals. Wisconsin has done much in the last thirty years to reduce the extent of its wild areas. Railroads have been built through its forests; wagon roads have been opened from the railroad stations in all directions, and settlers have multiplied until there are few counties in the northern half of the state that can be said to be comfortable abiding places for the kind of wild animals which the state pays a bounty on. There are men who have lived a quarter of a century and who have spent considerable time in the woods who have never seen or heard a wolf, a wild cat or any other obnoxious wild animal, and yet the amount of money paid as bounty on wild animals increased from $7,935 in 1889 to $24,424 in 1908. Why?"

In his first message to the legislature in 1901, the late Gov. La Follette inserted a table showing the state's receipts and disbursements for the ten years preceding, concluding his comments thereon with:

"While there is evidence of unquestioned benefit derived from most of the expenditures, an advance of 50 per cent in the cost of state government in a period of ten years is entitled to high rank among the facts worthy of grave consideration."

Now what would His Lateness say to the advance of 400 per cent in the succeeding ten years?

The plain business man characterizes it as a wasteful, extravagant and pernicious use of the people's money—but more than that he sees danger in the socialistic tendencies engendered by a platform whose strongest stanchion is "everything that anybody wants."

The commissions that are given such enormous power create a feeling of insecurity in business. A man no longer feels he is the head of his own affairs. Some sort of a commission steps in to regulate this and to regulate that until it looks as if the time was not far distant when a commission would be established to regulate his religion.

In Norway, which has gone so strongly socialistic, a similar condition exists, and it has grown to such proportions that now it is estimated that one man in every three is appointed to watch what the others are doing.

Progressive laws are all right, but they are only wise when enacted by conservative people. The real force must come from behind—it must be the necessity of times and the result of conditions—not the leadings of a crazy mob urged only by desire and self-interest, rushing on like a runaway team; for the mob like the excited team has lost all sense of direction. These immense sums placed in unaccustomed hands has frenzied them—too much power has made them mad.

The thinking citizen knows that taxes are not money picked out of the air; but money taken from his own pocket and that this money earned by the sweat of his brow and brain and spent so lavishly is not bringing in returns. The object of taxation is not to impoverish the people, but to bring wealth and capital into the state and to drive it away.

The same thoughtful citizen is beginning to realize, too, that the voice that could be heard in every part of the state, ringing clear and strong above the storm that beat upon him, "one" has been a pretty expensive proposition, and he has a dim, and yet constantly more definitely defined idea that it has not helped any one but the owner of that voice. This thinking citizen has about made up his mind that what Wisconsin needs is a good, steady business government and less political pyrotechnics in the way of reform, and it is likely that in November he will voice that sentiment.

"The people are tired of this paternalistic, progressive, probing into their private and personal affairs; they are tired of being governed by the university clique; they are tired of theorists, socialists and sociologists. They want a return to a safe and sane government by the people."

SIDEWALK KETCHES.

MEDICINE.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

MEDICINE is a set fish-quick device of the medical profession which is fed in large quantities to patients who can't eat anything else without developing a shooting pain. If it were not for medicine, there would be fewer physicians galloping around the summer resorts in white flannel pants.

Whenever a doctor pursues a medicine for somebody who is laboring in a plagues, pain in the stomach, the usually accompanying ailments by some expensive advice. It is much easier to get a good quality of advice after the patient has told the doctor just what is the matter with him, but there is no perceptible difference in the price.

Some people are opposed to medicine and never use it until their relatives begin to figure on dividing up the property, while others take it internally, externally and eternally and in time become as fragrant as a drug store—dozens of thousands of uncomplaining sufferers can never get a glimpse without immediately trying to conciliate it with a handful of white pills.

There are two schools of medicine—allopathy and homeopathy. The allopath physician is a high-class artist who makes a preliminary probe with calomel and then prescribes a liquid that would send the hide off an alligator grip. The homeopath takes the human tongue as his guide, and can always tell at a glance whether to use salt soda or opiate.

Some brands of medicine have more horsepower than others, and when taken in double doses will put the patient in fine condition for operation. The object of all medicine is to reconcile people to being dissected in every locality where disease is likely to be found.

Thousands of people are taking medicine when a brisk walk and an occasional bath would answer the purpose better. Medicine will not revive energy in a man who is suffering from a chronic attack of case-hardened laziness.

Mrs. Henry Brown was pleasantly surprised at her home Saturday evening by a number of her friends.

Lee Raymond is working at De Kalb, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Swan of Janesville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Case.

Will and Harry Weirick and friends spent Sunday at the parental home.

North Dakota Industrial Show, Bismarck, N. D., Oct. 1.—The second annual North Dakota Industrial Exposition was formally opened today with an address by Governor Burke. Every county of the state has exhibits this year illustrating its products and resources. The exposition will continue for two weeks.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Actions of men and women take a month's misery and then never know the misery caused by a lax liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

The Chronicles of Addington Peace

By B. FLETCHER ROBINSON
Co-Author with A. Conan Doyle of The Hound of the Baskervilles

But in the meantime the old dealer may—
"Tut, tut, Mr. Phillips. The old dealer has nothing to do with it. He is only obeying an order to buy the toy whatever it cost, and to keep it until called for. We may have to waste some time, so I have ordered a steak and fried potatoes in an upper room that conveniently overlooks the door of his shop. Let me show you the way."

We passed through a long bar at which a dumpy assemblage lounged and smoked, and so upstairs into a private room, the windows of which commanded Ashley street. We ate our meal in relays—one watching at the window, while the other disposed of his section of stringy steak and heavy beer. The daylight softly faded, the gas jets sprang out along the street, the tramp of homecoming fathers dropped into silence—but there was still no caller at the furniture shop. The shutters had been put up for the night. It seemed plain to me that nothing would happen for that evening at least, though Peace did not seem to despond.

Nine o'clock—ten o'clock—ten-thirty, and the customer arrived. I had watched his cab come rattling down the street with a casual interest, for many had come and gone since we first mounted guard. He had passed the little shop and was almost beneath us, when a head was thrust out of the window and a voice cried irritably to the cabman. A street lamp showed him to me clearly—a white-faced youth with a straggly brown mustache and an indecisive chin.

The cab turned about, and pulled up opposite the shop door. The inspector touched my arm, and we walked down the stairs, picked up our driver, who was smoking in the bar, and so bundled into our own vehicle. A few whispered instructions, and we drove slowly round the corner into Ashley street.

The customer had been expected. As we passed the shop at a walking pace I could see that the dealer and his assistant were hoisting the bicycle horse to the roof of the waiting cab. Fifty yards more and we drew up to the pavement.
Peace kept the windows closed, so that I could not look back along the road; but through the glass in front I could see that our driver was quietly taking note of affairs. It was not the first time that the inspector had employed him, as I learnt afterwards, and the man knew his business.

Suddenly our cab whirled round and set off at a rapid pace. The stranger had selected a fast horse, that was evident. We swung through a maze of narrow streets, tucked up a long hill, skirted a stretch of open common—a part of Hampstead Heath, I believe—and finally stopped in the shade of some tall trees. As I got out I saw the lights of the chaise stationary at some distance up the road.

"There may be trouble, Mr. Phillips," whispered the little detective. "I'm not certain I ought to bring you along. If anything—"
"Nonsense!" I interrupted, glancing down at him with some amusement. "Well, take this, anyway. I had it from a German burglar."

He thrust a strip of hardened rubber into my hand about eighteen inches in length by two in thickness. "It will suit a man without leaving a mark," he said gently.
The four-wheeler that we had followed was waiting before a green door set in a high brick wall. Without any attempt at concealment, Peace walked to the door and tried the handle. It was not locked, and we passed into a fair-sized garden, set about with flower beds and clumps of laurel. In the middle I could see the outline of a square gray house. Two of the ground floor rooms glowed behind their curtains; the rest was darkness.

We crossed a corner of the lawn, and stopped behind a patch of bushes directly in front of the entrance porch. The night was very still and silent. What desperate men were gathered in that quiet place? How could we hope to arrest them flushed with the triumph of so splendid a centrifuging started me for a moment.

"You can understand Steadman's folly when, after all his plots and risks and expenditure, his wily dupe brought him back the identical imitation stone that had been made to deceive old Taubery. I don't believe that the Trojans could have been more astonished when the Greeks emerged from the wooden horse than was Steadman when he took out the diamond from the toy and found it to be the imitation!"

"And who was Steadman?"
"A very dangerous fellow, Mr. Phillips. I recognized him the moment he appeared at the door. For years he was a bookmaker in Paris, but left when the place got too hot for him. As a card player he is well known and avoided. He has been in low water lately. So has his dupe, Carstairs, as I now discover. Lord Winton, the young man's brother, set him up as a coffee planter in Ceylon, but he spent all the money given him; and returned six months ago. Carstairs was a distant connection of Mrs. Taubery's and both she and her husband had been very kind to him. He was always loafing about the house, getting free meals and now and then borrowing a liver. He must have heard of the new diamond and mentioned it to Steadman; for Steadman hatched the plot—there is no doubt about that. Carstairs was merely a dupe and a foolish, vicious dupe at that—he never had the ability to rise higher in crime. How the two became acquainted I do not know; but they have been seen together several times lately. You may take my word for it, that the public will be well rid of them for a year or two."

"Now, Jack Steadman, that is quite enough," said the inspector, pushing his way through the laurels.
"And who may you be?" cried the other, with a furious oath.
"My name is Addington Peace of the criminal investigation department of Scotland Yard, and I arrest you both for being concerned in the robbery of a valuable diamond, the property of Mr. Julius Taubery."

"Stolen a diamond?" he bellowed.
"Do you call that a diamond?"
He flung down a stone that sparkled in the lights behind him, and stamped it into the gravel with his heel.
"I am aware that it is the imitation," said the inspector. "But it was your fault that you missed the real thing. I have a cab waiting. You had better come with me quietly. And I warn you, Steadman, that anything you say will be used in evidence against you."

It was after two in the morning before the inspector tapped at the door of my rooms. I had made the fourth of that odd cab load to the nearest police station; for, though Mr. Jack Steadman had blustered, and the Hon. George Carstairs had groveled and whined thither, they had consented to go at last. And there I had left the detective and his prisoners, driving to my rooms to await his return.

"The case was not quite so difficult as you suppose, Mr. Phillips," he said, in answer to my question. "You remember that I believed the diamond to be still in the house?"
"Certainly."
"It would be hard to imagine a more useful ball. It was certain that the thieves would have another bite at it; it was also certain that I ought to be able to hook them when they did. Yet I very nearly lost the diamond after all. Taubery, Guntton and the servants had all declared that, since the robbery, nothing had been moved from the dining room, passage or library. There they made a mistake."

Taubery's little grandson, George, happened to leave his toy horse in the passage from the dining room, and into the hole made for the pomel that poor creature, Carstairs, had dropped the diamond with a last despairing effort to get rid of it before Colonel Guntton searched him. Ten minutes afterwards the little boy went out for a walk with his nurse, taking the horse with him. When he returned it was left, as usual, in the servants' quarters at the back. I never set eyes on it until a day later. Even then I should not have suspected what it contained had not the nurse complained to me of a man who followed her when she took George for his daily airing in the park. That was the sign for which I had been looking. I accompanied the pair on the following morning. I saw the man, but did not recognize him.

"Neither the nurse nor the boy could well be carrying the diamond about with them. There remained the horse. That night I extracted the real diamond, and not wishing to spoil my ball for the shy fish, I dropped the imitation stone into its place."
"The toy was watched by night and day. It was through a hint from me that it was included in the sale. Poor Colonel Guntton! I admit that his so-three hundred years before, when some courtier of Elizabeth, in tightly fitting hose and immaculate ruffles, chose it as the outlook from the windows of his dining-room.

In the middle of the terrace, Addington Peace stood, smoking a cigarette and talking to a tall and stately person in a black coat, who looked every inch the man he was—the butler of a British country house.
The little inspector turned, as he heard my footsteps on the gravel, and nodded a benevolent welcome.
"A fine morning, Mr. Phillips," he said. "I did not know you were staying in the neighborhood."
"I cycled over after hearing the news. Your name opened the gates, Inspector."
"Well, I am pleased to see you, anyhow. Mr. Roberts here was giving me his view of this unfortunate affair. You may continue, Mr. Roberts."
The butler had been staring at me with great suspicion; but apparently he concluded that, as a friend of a detective, I was a respectable person.
"Well, gentlemen," he said, in a soft, oily voice, as from confirmed over-eating, "my mind is, so to speak, a blank. But what I know I will say without fear or favor. Sir Andrew had not previously honored us with his presence, he having remained abroad from the death of Sir William, which was his uncle, some six months ago. Yesterday—that is, Thursday morning—he wired from London for a carriage to meet the 12:32 train. We were all in a flutter of excitement, as you can well imagine. But when he arrived it was, he said, with no intention of staying the night. During the afternoon he saw his agent on business, and afterwards went for a walk, returning about six. He dined at eight and had his coffee served in the small library."

Had Tuberculosis of Glands; Now Well

If you are a sufferer from Glandular Tuberculosis, or know of anyone so afflicted, it might be well to investigate this case, where the writer declares after a year of suffering, he found permanent relief and full recovery to health by using Beckman's Alternative, a medicine which has been effective in many cases of Tuberculosis.

257 Lariston St., Phila., Pa.
"Gentlemen:—In March, 1909, I was taken sick and my doctor pronounced my case 'Tuberculosis of the Glands.' Medical treatment did not help me, and on my doctor's advice, I went to a hospital to be operated upon, but failed. I was only temporary. I lost strength, and at times would have cold sweats and fever. In April, 1910, I returned to the hospital, but the continued operations were not beneficial to me.
"In the meantime, a friend of mine advised Beckman's Alternative, saying it was good for Tuberculosis. The wounds in my neck were still open and in a frightful condition when I started to take it. After using two bottles, I found I was improving, having gained weight since I have been taking it. I continued using it until I was well, which was in November, 1910. Before I took the medicine, I had three hemorrhages since I have been taking it. I have not had any. On November 11, 1910, I started to work, and since that time I have not lost one day's work through sickness. I can highly recommend Beckman's Alternative to anyone who is suffering from Tuberculosis of the Glands, providing they take it as directed. I will gladly correspond with any party desiring further information of the case and the medicine did for me. (Signed) JOSEPH B. WILKIE.
Beckman's Alternative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. Ask for booklet, telling of recoveries and write to Beckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for evidence.
